

My family had left Poland in the early eighties to escape an authoritarian government, and the promise a free societies was something that had brought us here to the US. That promise of freedom is slowly yet surly being eroded, with this propoal to further de-regulate the already under-regulated media conglomerates being one more example. The news and information that the major corporation send over the (in theory) publically owned airwaves is just of a pathetically low standard, and is so monotonous and biased that it is very much reminiscent of the Soviet propoganda I had grown up on as a kid. Please, don't make it any worse.
